Hi Kristen,

To whoever wrote this, please share the good news that it is an excellent report. This will certainly help analysts who are being questioned on this group from time to time.

A good example of a long, but relevant document.

Thank you!

INTELLIGENCE AND IDEOLOGICALLY-MOTIVATED VIOLENT EXTREMISM

RCMP SPEAKING POINTS:

- Canadians have the legitimate right to protest and express disagreement with Government of Canada policy or decisions.
- Although most people participating in the Ottawa protest were motivated by a desire to end COVID-related mandates, we assessed that some ideologically motivated extremists were likely present and attempting to leverage the protest and its high profile for their own purpose.
- We knew that some of these individuals posed possible threats to national security.
- Although no formal organized violent plot was identified during the protest in Ottawa, the potential for serious violence by a lone actor or fringe group was never discounted.
- We were fortunate that there was no organized plot of violence as we witnessed in Coutts, Alberta.
- The RCMP investigates persons who are suspected of being engaged in criminal activity, including offences related to terrorist entities. Our investigations target criminal activity that threatens the safety and security of Canadians.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS:

OPP Commissioner Thomas Carrique has stated that intelligence indicated that the convoy posed a national security threat on or about February 7th. Does the RCMP agree with this assessment?

- The RCMP works closely with the OPP and all of its policing partners and this includes the sharing of intelligence information.
- Although I cannot get into operational specifics, it was known to the RCMP that there were some individuals within the convoy who posed potential threats to national security.
- Once a nexus to national security is identified, the RCMP assumes the lead on the investigation and works collaboratively with other police services to ensure that the threat is addressed.

According to the RCMP's assessment, were there IMV extremists among the convoy's participants?

- Although the majority of individuals participating in the Ottawa protest were motivated by a desire to end COVID-related mandates, some individuals assessed to be possible ideologically motivated extremists were present and attempting to leverage the Convoy's platform and its high profile in Ottawa and across the country.

If pressed for further details on what law enforcement knew:

- These individuals were either known to law enforcement before the convoy's events or identified during the convoy by their online presence espousing racially motivated, ethno-nationalist, of anti-government or anti-authority grievances and in many cases espousing threats to violence in the name of these grievances.

Did the majority of convoy participants also demonstrate elements of IMVE?

- Most participants of the protests in Ottawa expressed frustrations with COVID restrictions and government health mandates.
- While this could be considered as an ideological motivation, it is not a violent one and does not fall within the categories associated with ideologically-motivated violent extremism or ideologically-motivated violent criminality.
- However, some ideologically motivated extremists appeared to try to leverage this platform as a mechanism to air their grievances, particularly those aimed at the government.
- Some of these grievances expressed an intent that could be perceived as potentially violent or extreme.

Did the presence of these individuals at the Ottawa protests constitute any form of criminality?

- The presence of ideologically motivated extremists does not necessarily mean ideologically motivated criminality or ideologically motivated violence will occur.
- It is important to remember that the government does not criminalize personal beliefs and police do not investigate belief.

If pressed further on elements of criminality:

- Expressions of hatred, regardless of how unacceptable they may be, do not typically meet criminal standards unless police hold evidence that demonstrates the statements were in a public place and incited hatred against an identifiable group where it is likely to lead to a breach of the peace.

- The belief itself is not criminal, rather it is the mobilization of belief to action – like inciting hatred against an identifiable group, threatening violence, or committing a violent act – that can be criminal.

What advice did you provide the Government (Minister/PM) regarding the invocation of the EA?

- I was invited to brief the Prime Minister's Incident Response Group (IRG) and the Minister of Public Safety, among others, throughout the crisis and provided regular situational awareness updates.
- While I am not able to speak to the specific advice that I provided, I would say that I briefed on:
 - the threat environment nationwide, which was fluid and uncertain;
 - the challenges that were being experienced at different blockade/protest sites; and,
 - additional tools that could be useful for the policing community should the Government decide the Emergencies Act was necessary.

Did the RCMP have any tangible evidence to suggest a link between terrorist threat related activity and the protests occurring nationwide?

- The RCMP was aware of the presence of some individuals and groups that fell under the category of IMVE.
- The RCMP had several files on individuals and/or groups where there was a concern from a "threat to public safety" perspective.

If pressed for further details about potential investigations:

- As there is an ongoing criminal investigation and civil lawsuits, the RCMP is not able to provide any information at this time.

At any point throughout the protests in Ottawa, was there ever the threat of a serious organized violent plot in Ottawa?

- Although the potential for serious violence by a lone actor or fringe groups was never discounted, no formal organized violent plot was identified during the duration of the protests in Ottawa.
- While there was no organized violent plot in Ottawa, a cache of firearms, ammunition and body armour was seized at the Coutts, Alberta, border crossing with markings from the extremist militia known as Diagonon. This demonstrates the concern of groups with extremist agendas infiltrating larger protests.

Hi Ashley,

I was thinking we might wait to send the DIAGOLON paper to Sean McGillis, Stephanie McLean, AC Michel Arcand and Sanda Ajzerle until after Eliane says it's okay to distribute wider (they work outside of FPNS).

So please don't distribute the product to those four above until after you can ask Eliane about sending the product out wider. All the rest that I identified (below from my first email) are still good to include.

Once you've added the serial number, feel free to PDF and distribute the product direct to FPNS. I would address the email to the following: Eliane Caron and Walter Mendonca. Please also .cc (in this order) DCFP Michael Duheme, AC Mark Flynn, Adriana Poloz, AC Michel Arcand, Sean McGillis, Sue Efford, Krista Hanniman, me, Greg O'Hayon, Garrett, Kandi, Anna Lai, Danielle Clarkin, Sanda Ajzerle and Stephanie McLean. In your email body, let them know this product is in response to a FPNS request for an assessment on DIAGOLON and that, should there be any questions, to please feel free to contact the FPNI IMCIT or the product author Kandi Piamonte directly.

Many thanks Ashley!

Saanich gunman used anti-government hashtags on Instagram | CTV News

"An Instagram account belonging to one of the two gunmen killed in a shootout at a bank in Saanich, B.C., this week paints a picture of a young man who believed gun ownership was a necessary response to government "tyranny." CTV News Vancouver Island has confirmed that the now-deleted account @isaacauchterlonie867 belonged to Isaac Auchterlonie, one of the two 22-year-old gunmen killed by police Tuesday."

Brothers in botched B.C. bank robbery had become angry and radical, obsessed with guns and 'government tyranny' - The Globe and Mail

The Highland Park suspect falls within a new violent extremist culture. : NPR

"Rather than falling neatly into categories familiar to law enforcement and the public, such as white supremacists, radical Islamists or antigovernment militants, it requires an understanding of dark, online subcultures that overlap and feed into each other in ways that glorify violence and foster nihilism. Alarmingly, these experts say these online milieus have been tied to an increasing number of mass shootings over time. [...] Researchers who've combed through Crimo's digital footprint say the content is strikingly unoriginal. "It's just like a zoomer spin on zoomer trends and mass murders that have already been done before," said Sarah Hightower, using a term that refers to members of Generation Z. Hightower is an independent researcher focused on the extreme far right and online cultic movements. For example, Hightower noted one video that shows a cartoonized version of the suspect with a long gun in a bloody confrontation with law enforcement officers. "He's not the first mass shooter to animate himself into a Columbine massacre-type animated music video," she said. Hightower said a man who committed a mass-murder/suicide at a grocery store in Pennsylvania in 2017 did the same."

Staring and pointing - by Ryan Broderick - Garbage Day ("We Are Simply Not Ready To Talk About Schizoposting")

"Schizoposting is complicated. So much so that I reached out to extremism researcher Emmi Conley about how it intersects with mass violence and online radicalization. "It's nihilism. It's depression. It's extremely digital culture," she told me. "[But] the aesthetic, not the ideology, is the thing that ties the violent actors together." And that aesthetic is connected to dozens of other, sometimes random and conflicting memes. But it is safe to say that it is usually fascist and accelerationist [...] For a lot of internet users in the age cohort the Highland Park shooter was a part of the internet is a collage that is both public and private, deeply personal and utterly meaningless. A personality sandbox. It's a hyper-real space where they can mix and match aesthetics and references and identities that don't really mean anything individually, but, from a macro perspective, start to feel like they could mean something as a whole. We've all, at this point, probably had this experience, scrolling through someone's blog or Instagram, where we start to feel some kind of vibe from that person without really digesting individual posts. That feeling is the one being hijacked and commented on by schizoposting. It's like noise music. Cobbling together some kind of emotion through static and hiss and feedback, only schizoposts do that with deep-fried memes and Drain Gang references and alien conspiracy theories about reptiles and lofi hip hop mixtapes and violent fascist imagery."

When branding turns toxic: a theoretical framework for modern extreme-right brand networks: Behavioral Sciences of Terrorism and Political Aggression: Vol 0, No 0 (tandfonline.com)

"This article proposes a new theoretical framework to conceptualize extreme-right entrepreneurial activities as 'toxic' brand networks. It applies political marketing and branding, consumer culture, and customer engagement research to different extreme-right identity myths and narratives that are connected through various commercial goods, services, and subcultural products, such as martial arts, music, and clothing. The article argues that a comprehensive understanding of the threats posed by the modern extreme right is limited by the lack of attention on their political marketing and branding strategies.”

Since 2019, there have been at least nine examples of extremists, terrorists, or paramilitaries making, or attempting to make, 3D-printed guns in Europe and Australia. This unprecedented surge in cases gives a glimpse of a future where such occurrences may become routine. While we have already seen their proliferation among criminals, we are now witnessing extremists worldwide searching for, downloading, sharing, and manufacturing 3D-printed gun designs.”
